

Roxanne Driediger – Summer Instructor

Currently a third year drawing major at the Alberta College of Art and Design, Roxanne is studying towards a Bachelor of Fine Arts. She has participated in several internal exhibitions at ACAD, and recently exhibited work at the Epcor Centre for the Performing Arts in a solo show entitled “Non-disjunction: Whose Disability Culture?”. She maintains an interest, both professionally and through her involvement with IDAS, in furthering the engagement of disability arts perspectives with mainstream arts programming in Calgary.

Roxanne also demonstrates an ongoing commitment to the development of public art initiatives which serve to enrich the broader Calgary community. She has assisted on several large scale mural projects throughout Alberta, including the Observation Terrace on Sulphur Mountain, Banff in 2005, and exhibit work for the Calgary Airport Authority in cooperation with Parks Canada/Alberta Parks in 2006. She is currently working collaboratively on a mural project for the Calgary Humane Society.

Roxanne came to In-Definite Arts as a volunteer in the spring of 2007 and subsequently served as a summer instructor for that year. She returns this summer to assist, both with studio instruction, and with the professional artistic development of IDAS’ artists.
